The colorful cover of our fall catalogue features Peggy Collins's clever book art from our new release of The Stolen Statue, #5 in the Mystery at the Biltmore Series. Colleen Nelson, author of the Biltmore series has been travelling on the East Coast for Canada Book Week visiting schools and bookstores, and in June she will be in Chicago for the American Library Association convention to promote her new Pajama titles. The Biltmore series has quickly established itself in the world of mystery titles for young readers! All titles are available or forthcoming in Audiobook and eBook editions. However, the big news is that the backlist titles are now releasing in paperback editions every season. Please find these new Biltmore titles in the colorful pages of our catalogue and we hope you enjoy them.

Promotionally, we will be releasing an amazing new animated trailer which features the three main characters of Mystery at the Biltmore: Elodie, Oscar and Carnegie—the energetic West Hyland White Terrier. The trailer will be part of a Mystery at the Biltmore social media campaign, and we will also feature it on our website. This amazing, animated clip was created by Kenay Maldonado, a gifted student of Peggy Collins with the Animation Program at Loyalist College.

Our fall list features Michelle Kadarusman's sequel, Listening for Tigers, to her award-winning novel, Music for Tigers. Watch for early chaplets of this exciting Book II of The Tiger Trilogy. And included in our exciting line-up are two new series. Preschool Pretend, created by Kari-Lynn Winters for Kindergarten and Grade 1 children, celebrates drama and imagination. Our first title is I Am a Growl, followed by I Am a Squeak. Jennifer Maruno's new series, Babies Bloom, offers new parents engaging books for their newborns in a beautiful gift format, perfect for baby showers or newborn gifts.

And lastly, a very funny middle grade novel, What If There Are Alligators? from the award-winning author, Beverley Brenna, will entertain young readers with lots of laughs.

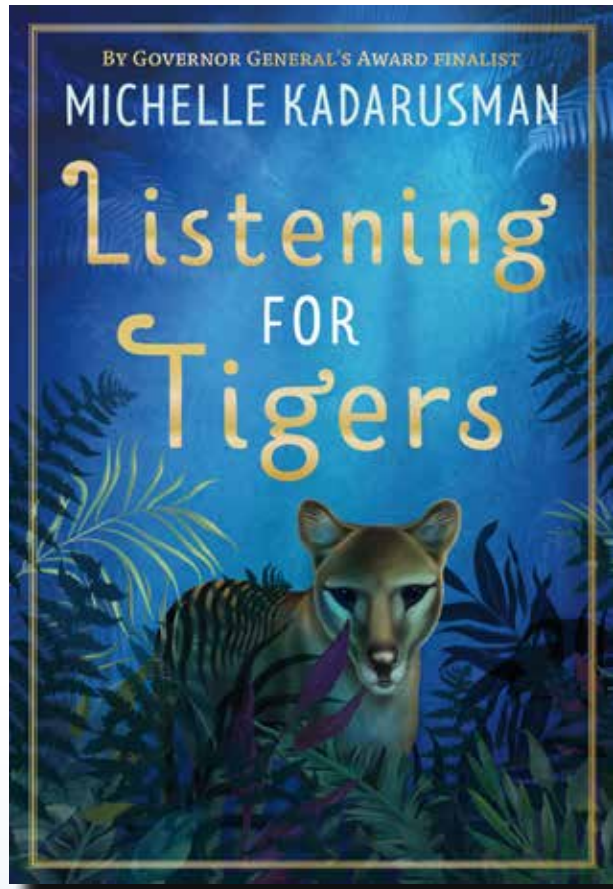

Have an amazing fall season!

From the pen of award-winning author Beverley Brenna comes a heart-warming story about a boy who overcomes an irrational fear, gains confidence in his ability to problem solve, learns to become a strong team player on his aunt’s farm, and ultimately demonstrates uncommon bravery.

Nine-year-old Belvin has always lived in the shadow of his gregarious twin brother Beaman, who is determined to go away to summer camp—which Belvin will not. His parents have decided to take different paths for their summer vacation, so his perceptive mom sends Belvin to his Aunt Edna’s goat farm. Belvin misses home at first and is reluctant to try new things—until he does, gaining more confidence every day as he learns to navigate the farm from wise Aunt Edna. Beverley Brenna’s knack for writing a funny tale shines in this hilarious middle grade story which will appeal to young readers who are contemplating a summer away from home.

“This slice-of-life Canadian import is more than just another ‘I want to get a pet’ tale....Sapphire and Jeannie narrate alternating chapters, and neither is completely aware of all that is going on around them. Sapphire, especially, reports dialogue and action she does not fully understand, adding an additional layer to this tale of understanding difference.”

Slated for a October 2026 release, Listening for Tigers—an enlightening work by Michelle Kadarusman—pulls readers back into the story of middle-schooler, Louisa, a year after her life-changing adventure in Tasmania.

Louisa, while spending the summer at her grandfather’s farmhouse in rural Ontario, recovering from an injured elbow, and preparing for her next musical chapter carries an extraordinary secret: the Tasmanian tiger, believed extinct for nearly a century—still survives in the wild.

When a de-extinction organization begins searching for evidence of the lost species and Louisa’s biologist mother is asked to help, Louisa frets that Ellie—the thylacine she helped protect—is again in danger.

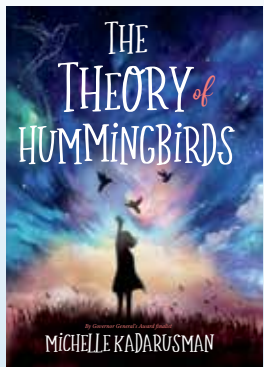

As Louisa navigates family challenges and a frightening accident of her own, she finds guidance in the steady wisdom of her grandfather and the journals of her great-grandmother Eleanor. Through music, dreams, and the rhythms of the nature, Louisa begins to understand that intuition and science can exist side by side.
